From Padang was exported, in 1871, 6,127 piculs of cassia bark, of which a large portion was shipped to America (Flickiger and Hanbury)... (excerpt from Spices, Ridley, 1912)

Historical analysis & ontology development

Text mining and ontology management

Data integration & dissemination

Information visualisation

Trading Consequences
Bea Alex, Timothy Bristow, Jim Clifford, Colin Coates, Ian Fieldhouse, Claire Grover, Uta Hinrichs, Ewan Klein, Clare Llewellyn, Nicola Osborne, Aaron Quigley, James Reid and Richard Tobin Contact: dig-trade@inf.ed.ac.uk, Twitter: @digtrade Blog: http://tradingconsequences.blogs.edina.ac.uk/

ProQuest’s House of Commons Parliamentary Papers Kew Garden’s Director’s Correspondence Archive AMD Confidential Prints
Early Canadiana Online

spices1912ridley
docid
spices1912ridley
title
Spices
url
http://archive.org/details/spiceshenry00ridlrich pubdate
1912
type
text
author
Ridley, Henry N.
lang
eng
Collection
id
books
text
books

location
id
geonames:

latitude
-0.94924
longitude
100.35427
geom
0101000020E6100000DFD135CA02C60EEBF

cassia bark

CommodityMention
id
rb5373
preLabel
cinnamon

text
cassia bark

start_word w446990
end_word
w446997
date
1871

CommodityMention
id
rb5373
text
cassia bark

prefLabel
cassia bark

altLabel
cinnamomum cassia

LocationMention
id
rb5370
text
Padang

start_word
w446944
end_word
w446944
in_country
Indonesia
gazref
geonames:
feature_type
populated place
direction
origin

DateMention
id
rb5371
text 1871

year
1871
month
day

QuantityMention
id
rb5372
text 6127 piculs

quantity
6127
unit
piculs