

Structural vs Statistical Model

What different aspects of the objects do the structural and statistical models encode?

The structural model encodes the ways in which the individuals can vary and the statistical model encodes how much variation is normal.