3D Model Matching Question

What is the difference between the verification conditions used in the 2D and 3D rigid line model matching algorithms?

Essentially no difference: vector directions and distances use 3D calculations instead of 2D, but the basic concepts are identical.