

Edge Detection Question

From the perspective of computer vision, what are 'edges'?

Places in the image where there are large changes in intensity values. Some edge detectors only select places where the changes are maximal. The assumption is that these image edges correspond to interesting changes in the observed scene.