

Track Discussion Question

What are some of the issues that arise when using an adaptive background model (at least as described in these lectures)?

Keeping multiple examples of the background at each pixel can require a lot of memory, and also a lot of computation to compute the probability that an observed pixel is explained by the background model.