Signatures Problem

How does the shape context property create different descriptions for different locations?

ANSWER:
Each location gets a 2D histogram that counts the number of feature points in each region surrounding the selected location. The method assumes that the neighboring distribution of points is different, and thus the histogram will also be different.