

Image Physics Introduction Review Problem

If my camera measures a red channel value of 200 when observing a small patch of surface in the scene, what factors determine that value?