

Pose Estimation Question

Why did we use least square algorithms for estimating the rotation and translation, instead of using a single line (which would give the rotation) and a single point (which would give the translation)?